A.D.A. Law and Disclosure

Federal Law ADA Title III prohibits discrimination on the basis of disability in the activities of places of public accommodations (businesses that are generally open to the public and that fall into one of 12 categories listed in the ADA, such as Auto Repair Shops, Auto Body Shops, Smog Shops, Restaurants, Movie Theaters, Schools, Day Care Facilities, Recreation Facilities, Contractors even if operating out of your home and Doctors' Offices) and requires newly constructed or altered places of public accommodation—as well as commercial facilities (privately owned, nonresidential facilities such as Factories, Warehouses, or Office Buildings)—to comply with the ADA Standards. Only Church's or Private Organizations are excluded.

California Law AB2917 The Unruh act or Civil Rights Act.

Complying with the Unruh Act requires businesses to make sure that they are taking the necessary steps to ensure accessibility.

Part of this means modifying any physical property a business may own. Such modifications include:

- I. Installing ramps and handrails
- II. Making exits/entrances wide enough to accommodate mobility devices
- III. Creating accessible parking

Businesses should also ensure that their digital products or platforms remain accessible. Due to the precedent set by the Robles vs. Domino's Pizza case, websites are considered "places of public accommodation." As such, if a business's website is inaccessible, they risk facing both an Unruh Act and ADA Title 3 violation(s).

Steps businesses can take to maintain digital compliance with Unruh Act include the following:

- Providing alt-text on images
- Ensuring website compatibility with screen readers
- Using legible color contrast ratios
- Offering audio description on video content

The California legislature passed AB 2917 by an overwhelming majority; and this bill was signed into law. The bill reflects the legislature's awareness of the voluminous lawsuits that burden businesses operating in California while maintaining its interest in establishing accessibility standards.

Web Content Accessibility Guidelines, or WCAG, is considered to be the benchmark for website accessibility. Created by the World Wide Web Consortium (W3C), following WCAG guidelines is the best and the easiest way of making your website usable for all of your customers.

What are the 4 principles of accessibility?

The industry standard guidelines for web content accessibility are organized around four principles: Perceivable, Operable, Understandable, and Robust (or POUR). To help you understand the basics of accessibility, we've put together an introduction to these principles

If you would like more information about the ADA Accessibility compliance required for Websites under the ADA Title 3 Law or the California Unruh act, let us know.

We Install a Free Tool that will cover roughly 70% of compliance. Meaning according to ADA laws this will not be compliant and you could be sued. We offer a Paid tool we will install for free for you as our client. The 3rd party company tool will be a monthly fee of $50.00. However, you may choose any company you feel will protect you. Companies like Userway, www.userway.org, accessiBe, www.accessibe.com, Equalweb, www.equalweb.com and there are many more.
